SECOND TERM TEST

That little society, that little state, which we call a school, can train – or fail to train – its members in all the virtues of a democray. It can be a place where is no bullying or injustice, where children are kind to each other considerate each other.If it is, its pupils are trained to be fair, kind, and tolerant in later life.If there is bullying, unkindness,injustice,its pupils are being trained in vices from which the world suffers.

Then the school can be a training for that intelligent self-government which is the essence of democracy.In the type of school,the pupils have some share in making school rules and seeing that they are kept.They get a chance of making suggestions and expressing their views.They do not merely attend school but become members of it ;and in fact within limits for the teacher must have the last word they act as members of a democratic society.

Finally ,there is the democratic virtue of public spirit ;the sense of anyone who belongs to a community has a duty towards it ,and must avoid what Emerson called « the one base thing to receive and not to give ».

Many schools have a system of duties ;and as many pupils as possible has some duty to perform for the whole community .Routine duties are the simplest and cover such matters as distribution of letters and papers,tidiness,waiting at meals,arranging flowers.Responsibility for things comes next in difficulty .This includes care of equipement of any kind,for gardening or games.Care of the bicycle shed,or the gramophone or radio,leads on to more important responsibilities the library,the laboratories,the workshops,the canteen,the gymnasium,the school hall.Then there is responsibility for running school societies,the choral society, the gardening club ,the chess club,the photography society or any other.These activities develop a sense of belonging to a community .They are the foundation of a habit of public service.
