Third Term English Test

Pollution is any contamination of the environment which causes harm to the nature or its inhabitants. There are four sorts of pollution: air, water, noise and land pollution.

First, air pollution is a result of the noxious gases and the smokes released from cars and factories. People hardly breathe fresh air. So, they suffer from many diseases like "Asthma". Second, water pollution is caused by dropping litter in the water. Therefore, it affects the submarine life.

Third, noise pollution results from loud sounds inside and outside. It harms people's health as they suffer from psychological problems like "stress". Finally, land becomes much polluted because people throw rubbish everywhere. Therefore, most humans suffer from allergy and respiratory diseases.

In brief, people should co-operate to put an end to pollution or it will be an environmental suicide for humanity.
