First English Test (Second Term)

A lot of people enjoy surfing on the Net. They look for interesting Websites and chat with people all over the world. However, some people spend so many hours on line that they are Internet addicts. Although an average person spends about eight to twelve hours per week, an addict spends eight to twelve hours a day on line.

Psychologists have started to define terms like Facebook addiction in their reports. Social media sites can be so addicting that people, especially do not want to spend time with anything else, they live their relationships in a virtual world. Internet addiction negatively affects not only the addicts themselves, but also the people around them.

Students become nonstop Net surfers. They spend too much time surfing the Net instead of surfing their textbooks..

People often choose to talk to each other via mobile phone, Skype or communicate via Facebook because they may be afraid of getting to know each other, face to face.

Facebook has defined privacy in a new way. Many things that should be private have become public. Social media has changed the world. Facebook, Twitter and others are omnipresent. They are the last things we worry about when we go to bed and the first thinks we check on when we get up.
