Corruption in Sports

It is important to acknowledge that corruption impacts many levels of numerous sports, including the amateur, youth and senior levels, it may be in form of embezzlement of funds and the use of bribes to get enrolled in a sports academy, to secure a place on a team or to make undue payments to amateur players.

Football is one of the sports that are affected the most by corruption. In 2006, Juventus, a famous football club in Italy, was accused of manipulating and fixing games with other teams, with the help of corrupt referees, players and official. As a consequence, the team had to dismount to the second league and its last two-championship titles 2005 and 2006 were withdrawn, while the manager was sentenced to 5 years of occupational ban.

The fight against corruption in sports is of high importance, not just for the image of sports, but also to help rebuild public trust in sports institutions. The key for the success of this campaign is to ensure that everyone involved in sports, from players, to trainers, to organising bodies work together, share information and aim for the same goal – fairness and safety in sports.
