The third English exam:

Text:

Many animals are facing extinction as the giant panda, African elephant, snow leopard, black rhinoceros, and sea turtle because of habitat loss, climate change, and human activities such as poaching. For some people, hunting is a way to obtain food or resources that help us to survive. For others, hunting is an activity that provides a sense of challenge, adventure, or connection with nature. Some people also hunt animals for their fur, horns, or other body parts which are used for commercial or cultural purposes. Other animals have been killed because they attack the farmer's animals. Hunting can affect animal populations negatively. People must treat animal well because they are living things like us.

Studies have shown that people who have pets or interact with animals experience lower levels of stress, fear and are happier and healthier. Additionally, treating them well can help prevent the spread of diseases and promote them from disappearing forever. There are a lot of special organizations, which try to save our nature. The most known are: The World Wildlife Fund (WWF) and Greenpeace. As many scientists devoted their lives and careers saving and protecting that wildlife like Jane Goodall, who spent decades studying chimpanzees, to marine biologists like Sylvia Earle, who have worked tirelessly to protect our oceans and wildlife, women have played a critical role in advancing our understanding of animals and their habitats.

So, let's do the same as these women to save the fauna. We must take care of nature because we are part of it.
